Speeds Up Germany Border Defences

.. Berlin, Aug. 25. Political circles in Berlin are anxiously awaiting news from Prague regarding the progress made towards reconciling the extreme viewpoints between Sudetens Czechs, but the protracted dispute is causing increasing nervousness.

Political circles vary in opinion from doubtful to despondent. The general feeling among well-informed foreign observers here is that the Czechs and Germans have committed themselves so deeply that they have made retreat without loss of prestige difficult, if not impossible.

Observers here are of two minds whether the German demands for autonomy would stop at their fulfilment or whether they mask an ambition to control the whole Danubian basin.

After days of fighting, a lull has set in on the west shore of Poyang Lake.

hot weather . . . don't cook vourself!

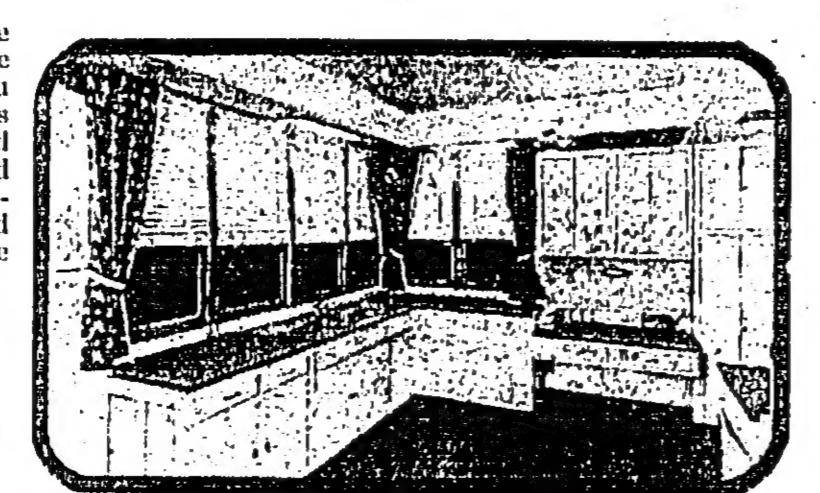

TT IS NOT GOOD to meet your husband at dinner looking like the nearest human approach to a boiled lobster, nor is it imposing to greet your guests that way. Keep your kitchen cool, preserve your temper and your good looks.

Here are some leading points: First-get rid always of the used air: a small evacuating fan will do this noiselessly for very small cost indeed. That also means cooking smells don't creep into the house or flat. Then, when the sun is on the windows, draw all curtains-if you can afford venetian blinds for the kitchen, even better. A cold "mop-over" for the floor several times will help during the afternoon; and, if your refrigerator makes ice really smartly, use it as it's made-stand the ice about in bowls; that'll mop up the heat too.

If you can afford one of the three really efficient, inexpensive aircleaning gadgets, all the better: they actually cost from the price of a cheap radio to the price of a fairly good radio. There's a disinfectant, too, that, stood about in bowls, absorbs smells, freshens the air and is well worth trying.

VENETIAN blinds over the windows help keep the kitchen cool, and give you "air without glare." This one is made of painted metal, hardwearing and good to look at, is a fashionable fitting for lounge and bedroom as well as for the domestic quarters.

MET THROUGH MARRIAGE BUREAU

6677 HAT letter which you wrote was, I think, the. most impudent thing I have ever come across. You not only swindle the woman, but then grossly insult her when you get her money by pretending you were in love with her married daughter Olive."

So said Mr. Justice Humphreys at Lewes Assizes recently, when sentencing Hugh Charles Morrison, 46-years-old architect, to 15 months' hard labour for marrying bigamously Florence Ide, a 58-years-old widow, of Yapton, Sussex, and for obtaining £300 from her by false pretences.

It appeared to be a very cruel deception, said Mr. Eric Neve, | circling millionaire.

prosecuting. Florence Ide, who kept a shop at Yapton, apparently worried by illness and business, desired to get married again and put herself in touch with a matrimonial agency. As a result Morrison went to see

Morrison was married at the Hendon Register Office to a woman named Kathleen Ann Holman on March 11.

"VIOLENTLY IN LOVE"

On March 16 Mrs. Ide, having made financial arrangements to Morrison's benefit, went through a ceremony of marriage with Morrison at Chichester, and they went back to Yapton that night. Morrison left Yapton on the next day, saying he would telegraph her, and on March 23 she was astonished to receive a letter from him which said:

My dear Flo, I hardly know how to start this letter to you because I know it is going to hurt, and I would do anything in the world to save you any pain. During my stay at Yapton I have fallen violently, in love with Olive. When it took place first really don't know. And, my dear, I don't want you to blame the dear girl, because she does not know anything about it.

Please do not tell her. It is a calamity, and, my dear, we cannot let it stand between us, though I cannot be all I should be to you. I am staying in London's few days until I get over the first shock, and then I will come down for you and we must clear out of Yapton at once, because I cannot bear to meet Olive again. "AMUSING AND CRUEL"

I shall look after you and do everything to make you as happy as you deserve to be. Please forgive me, and please believe me when I say it has been as big a shock to me as it must be to you. I shall write you again to-morrow. " Until "then, "I shall always remain, yours ever,

AVERAGES FOR FOUR TESTS

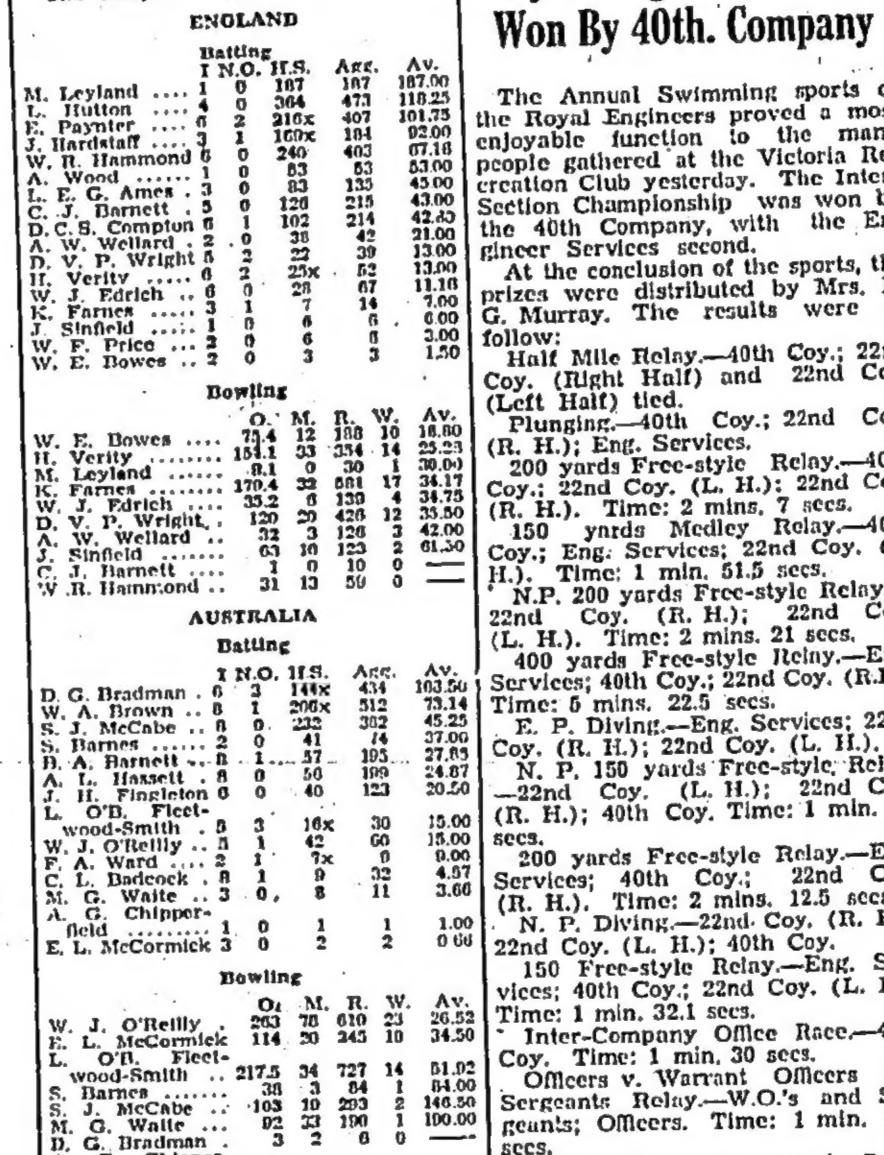

The superiority of the English batting and bowling is illustrated in the averages for the four Tests. England has six bats with averages over 50 (three being over the century), against only two Australians; and seven English bowlers finished with figures better than 50, against only two Australians.

A study of the figures reveals that the bulk of the Australian runs came from Bradman and Brown. McCabe's only good score was his 232 and the figures of the others are marked by the failure of the crack bats and the consistently moderate tallies of the bowlers and all-rounders. Brown, incidentally, was the highest scorer of both teams with 512 for eight in-

LIVING ALONE

730 live alone, either in the complete isolation of a house of one's own, or in the semi-loneliness of lodgings, has always been regarded by the majority of people as a most unsatisfactory state of affairs.

If ever we pause to think of those solitary people it is to conjure up a picture of an old mald, grown queer with the years and surrounded by her pets, or of some poor, helpless man having endless trouble with housekeepers or weary to death of unsatisfactory landladies.

But here I venture to say that those pictures are all wrong, that the people who live alone enjoy a much fuller life than those who are constantly surrounded by relatives or friends.

The obvious advantages of the lone dweller are many. They are free to come and go as they please, decisions can be made immediately, and their whole efforts can be concentrated on the project they may have on hand without any irritating distractions.

The Character Refined

But there are other advantages not quite so obvious. Living alone, for instance, develops the senses of responsibility and perception.

The solitary person gradually becomes an excellent judge of character, and while this process is taking place his own character is being stendily improved. There is a fining down, an elimination of all that does not matter, so that there is left a person keenly alive to the true perspective of things, which accounts for the fact that artists and writers are usually people of solitary habits.

There is so little quietness in the world to-day. The work of the average town dweller is accomplished amongst much noise, evenings are spent in crowded theatres or picture houses, and even holidays are taken in the mass. The crowd element is rampant, with the result that the minds and appearances of the people are becoming stereotyped. What better then to counteract this than the quietness of a room or flat that is all one's own? Noise has been described as the enemy of thought and as the grave of culture.

Afraid of Solitude

Most people are afraid to live alone. They dread the thought of lonely hours, forgetting the golden opportunities to pursue their aspira-tions to the full. Nor must they jib at the stigma of being called selfish and self-centred. It is the solitaries who have given most to the world.

There are many who, either through economic necessity or force of circumstances, never attain marriage. But should they despair? They may have missed one form of happiness, but there are others, and it is good to know that more solitude would give to the world the clear thinking it so desperately needs,

I'll Never

NO, I don't mean that I have been IN disqualified from holding a licence for dangerous driving, or that I have lost my nerve in a crash. After less than four months of motoring I have voluntarily sold my car, and my garage will be empty permanently.

Let me review my brief experience as a motorist. First of all the delleious satisfaction of owning a sleek, handsome car, and the exhitaration of personality that comes from the feel of 12 h.p. answering perfectly to your controls. Then my apprehensiveness when I went for my driving test (my friends had spoken to me darkly about the wily ways of examiners) and my relief when I passed it with flying colours, having even negotiated an unexpected test in the shape of a little girl who crossed the road somewhat erratically in my path with a decision that must have impressed the examiner, who set no traps to catch me off my guard.

I threw the embarrassing Ls on the fire, and began to picture pleasant, care-free days a-wheel,

Wool-Gathering

soon realised with dismay that I was beginning to drive my car in the same way. More than once I found myself being snatched from a fit of wool-gathering by the sight of the tail of a car looming up in front of me in a traffic jam, and only averting a collision by standing hard on everything. Now, I still believe I am a good driver. This is to say that I have an aptitude for the mechanism of a car, and my reflexes are brisk enough. But for all my ability to handle a car well and to act quickly in an emergency, I know that in certain circumstances I can be a very dangerous driver. With the roads so growded as they are, I am a potential' menace to others as well as to myself, and so I have decided to give up driving.

Gunner scated himself on the edge of the bed. Jim closed his eyes as if the bright sunlight streaming into the room was too much for him. There was a brief slience; then Jim opened his eyes again and sat up, leaning on one elbow, shaking his head. But the effort was too much for him and he dropped down against the pillow with a groan.

Canton, Aug. 26.

FOUNDED 1881 No. 15607

About a dozen Japanese planes, which appeared in groups of two from different directions over the city this morning, dropped twelve hombs on the Wongsha Station between 11 and 11.30 a.m.

The raiders were greeted by heavy antiaircraft fire which, however, was rendered ineffective by the height at which the raiders were flying.

The air raid alarm first sounded at 8 a.m. and the all clear had not been sounded at 11.45 a.m.

It is expected that some of the planes will return over the city after bombing the Canton-Kowloon railway.—United Press.

Tokyo, Aug. 25. Reports that General K. Ugaki, the Foreign Minister, was meeting with "personal difficulties" and, as a consequence, was being afforded special police protection, were denied in official circles to-day.

TT IS NOT GOOD to meet your husband at dinner looking like the nearest human approach to a boiled lobster, nor is it imposing to greet your guests that way. Keep your kitchen cool, preserve your temper and your good looks. Here are some leading points: First—get rid always of the used air: - a small evacuating fan will do this noiselessly for very small cost indeed. That also means cooking smells don't creep into the house or flat. Then, when the sun is on the windows, draw all curtains-if you can afford venetian blinds for the kitchen, even better. A cold "mon-over" for the floor several times will help during the afternoon; and, if your refrigerator makes ice really smartly, use it as it's made—stand the ice about in bowls; that'll mop up the heat too.

If you can afford one of the three really efficient, inexpensive aircleaning gadgets, all the better: they actually cost from the price of a cheap radio to the price of a fairly good radio. There's a disinfectant, too, that, stood about in bowls, absorbs smells, freshens the air and is well worth trying.

VENETIAN blinds over the windows help keep the kitchen cool, and give you "air without glare." This one is made of painted metal, hardwearing and good to look at, is a fashionable fitting for lounge and bedroom as well as for the domestic quarters.

Halifax In Conference

Prague, Aug. 25. Important meetings of Ministers were held this morning and afternoon under the chairmanship of the President Dr. Edouard Benes.

Not only was the general political situation discussed, but there is reason to believe that the military situation was also examined.

Reuter is informed, however, that no extraordinary measures are contemplated, nor any of an immediate character.

On the other hand there has been recently in which arms have been seized as they were being smuggled into the Sudeten districts.

The seizures seem to indicate that attempts are being made over a fairly wide area to get rifles and pistols into the hands of the Storm Troops' organisation of the Sudeten Party.-Reuter.

Arms For Sudetens

London, Aug. 25. Lord Halifax, the Foreign Minister, discussed the Czech situation with the French Charge d'Affaires this morning, following a meeting with the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir John Simon, and Lord Runciman's representative, Mr. G. Watkin, who is in London.

Later, Lord Hallfax left for Yorkshire, but is returning to the Foreign Office on Monday .- Reuter.

Hungarians Back Sudetens

Prague, Aug. 25. Lord Runciman to-day saw refood-stuffs which were in an had the same claims as the Sudetens and would make common cause with to them. A meeting of the Hungarian parliamentary representatives is reported, on the other hand, to have decided that the Government's proposals are inadequate.

"Well, if you come to that," at length said the exasperated man, "woman herself is only a side issue." A clergyman learned that through a friend his son had been appointed a teacher at a large institution for young ladies. Fearing an early marriage, he was horristed, and wrote an angry letter to the friend.

"There's nothing to be afraid of," was the reply, "for here are so many of them and the boy's safety is in Numbers." The clergyman immediately wired:
—"You are quite wrong—his only

"No," she replied, "you are much more like the fatted calf." A hefty looking carter met another cart in a narrow lane, and after some words he shouted out threateningly-"If you don't make room for me I will treat you as I treated the man I met here last week."

On that the threatened man backed his horse, and as the other was going by he asked--"Well, how did" you treat the man you met here last week?"

"Well, I just got out of his way!" Two art students were comparing notes, and one asked the other:-"What do you think of my draw-

LIVING ALONE

TO live alone, either in the complete isolation of a house of one's own, or in the semi-loneliness of lodgings, has always been regarded by the majority of people as a most unsatisfactory state of affairs,

If ever we pause to think of those solitary people it is to conjure up a pleture of an old maid, grown queer with the years and surrounded by her pets, or of some poor, helpless man having endless trouble with housekeepers or weary to death of unsatisfactory landladies.

But here I venture to may that those pictures are all wrong, that the people who live alone enjoy a much fuller life than those who are. constantly surrounded by relatives or friends.

The obvious advantages of the lone dweller are many. They are free to come and go as they please, decisions can be made immediately, and their whole efforts can be concentrated on the project they may have on hand without any irritating distractions.

The Character Refined

But there are other advantages not quite so obvious. Living alone, for instance, develops the senses of responsibility and perception.

The sollinry person gradually becomes an excellent judge of character, and while this process is taking place his own character is being steadily improved. There is a fin-ing down, an elimination of all that does not matter, so that there is left a person keenly alive to the true perspective of things, which accounts for the fact that artists and writers are usually people of solitary habits.

There is so little quietness in the world to-day. The work of the average town dweller is accomplished amongst much noise, evenings are spent in crowded theatres or picture houses, and even holidays are taken in the mass. The crowd element is rampant, with the result that the minds and appearances of the people are becoming stereotyped. What better then to counteract this than the quietness of a room or flat that is all one's own? Noise has been described as the enemy of thought and as the grave of culture.

Afraid of Solitude

Most people are afraid to live alone. They dread the thought of lonely hours, forgetting the golden opportunities to pursue their aspirations to the full. Nor must they jib at the stigma of being called selfish and self-centred. It is the solitaries who have given most to the world.

There are many who, either through economic necessity or force of circumstances, never attain marringe. But should they despnir? They may have missed one form of happiness, but there are others, and it is good to know that more solitude would give to the world the clear thinking it so desperately needs,

I'll Never Drive Again

NO. I don't mean that I have been IN disqualified from holding a licence for dangerous driving, or that I have lost my nerve in a crash. After less than four months of motoring I have voluntarily sold my car, and my garage will be empty permanently.

Let me review my brief experience as a motorist.

First of all the delicious satisfaction of owning a sleek, handsome car, and the exhibitantion of personality that comes from the feel of 12 h.p. answering perfectly to your controls. Then my apprehensiveness when I went for my driving test (my friends had spoken to me darkly about the wily ways of examiners) and my relief when I passed it with flying colours, having even negotiated an unexpected test in the shape of a little girl who crossed the road somewhat erratleally in my path with a decision that must have impressed the examiner, who set no traps to catch me off my guard.

I threw the embarrassing La on the fire, and began to pleture pleasant, care-free days n-wheel.

Wool-Gathering

I soon realised with dismay that was beginning to drive my car in the same way. More than once I found myself being anatched from a fit of wool-gathering by the sight of the tail of a car looming up in front of me in a traffic jam, and only averting a collision by standing hard on everything. Now, I still believe I am a good driver. This is to say that I have an aptitude for the mechanism of a car, and my reflexes are brisk enough, But for all my ability to handle a car well and to act quickly in an emergency, I know that in certain circumstances I can be a very dangerous driver. With the roads so crowded as they are, I am a poten-Unl menace to others as well as to myself, and so I have decided to give up driving.

Self-Satisfied Drivers

Talking about this decision to my to a state of strain and nervous ex-ability without vanity. friends, I began to realise how haustion. Now a man who allows

Here is a close-up of Douglas Corrigan, 31-year-old Los Angeles airplane mechanic, who made the illegal but amazing flight from New York to Dublin, Ireland. This shows him at Roosevelt Field shortly after he completed the unannounced flight from Los Angeles. Adventurous and brave, Corrigan is also modest and unassuming.

This W. W. Radiophoto from Dublin, Ireland, shows Douglas Corrigan. 31-year-old daredevil filer, drinking water at Baldonnel Airfield, Dublin, after his trans-Ocean flight, perhaps the most amazing in aviation history. Stepping into his 9-year-old plane he calmly made the hop of 2,300 miles in 28 hours 13 minutes, at a cost of $69.60.
